The date of October 31 might be Halloween in the United States, but in 2017, it is the 500th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation. On October 31, 1517, Martin Luther nailed his 95 theses against the abuse of the sale of indulgences on the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg, thereby not only changing the ecclesiastical world but setting in motion a reformation in politics, business, science, art, and culture.

'The Reformation is not finished. It remains a work in progress... It took nearly 300 years of the Reformation to help deliver religious liberty in the fledgling United States.... God has shone extraordinary light upon His last day church in order for the Reformation to be successfully concluded. This anniversary year is a wonderful opportunity to remember why God brought our Church into existence.'
